The retail inflation in India was 6.26 percent in June 2021 as the increasing cost of food and fuel prices continued to push the consumer price index (CPI) above the central bank’s 6 percent target.

In May 2021, CPI was pegged at 6.30 percent.

The CPI in urban areas (6.37 percent) continued to rise on a sequential basis and saw a seven-month high in June 2021.

The risk of rising cases and localised lockdowns have disrupted the supply and demand chains, thus putting upward pressure on commodity prices.

The wholesale price-based inflation eased marginally to 12.07 percent in June 2021, compared to 12.94 percent the previous month.

The wholesale price index (WPI) has been on an uptick for five months straight, seeing double-digit growth since April 2021.

The high inflation rate in wholesale prices is primarily due to the low base effect and rise in crude oil prices and manufactured products.
The Manufacturing Purchasing Managers Index (PMI) contracted for the first time in 11 months and reached 48.1 in June 2021, compared to 50.8 in the preceding month.

The downward revision of the growth comes on the back of restrictions, falling new orders, and business closures amidst the second wave of COVID-19 pandemic.

The Services PMI remained in the contraction zone and was pegged at 41.2 in June 2021, compared to 46.4 in May 2021.

The decline in new businesses, output and employment, impacted the Services PMI during the second wave. However, the contraction is much softer than that recorded during the first lockdown.

According to PMI parlance, a reading above 50 indicates expansion, while below 50 indicates contraction.
The non-food credit growth decelerated to 5.9 percent YoY in May 2021.

However, compared to previous months, the non-food credit growth has shown a marginal uptick after an all-time low in March 2021.

The credit in agriculture and allied services accelerated to 10.3 percent in May 2021, compared to 5.2 percent in the same period last year.

In line with the contraction of services activities during the second wave, the credit growth in this sector decelerated to 1.9 percent in May 2021 compared to 10.3 in May 2020.

With the opening of activities, personal loans grew by 12.4 percent in May 2021 compared to 10.6 percent a year ago.

The credit growth in the housing sector (including the priority sector) saw a growth of 10.1 percent YoY in May 2021.
Industrial production saw a growth of 29.3 percent YoY in May 2021. The same period the previous year saw IIP contract by 33.4 percent.

Although the second wave has been far more severe than the first, the indicators hint at a speedier recovery.

All sectors, except electricity, saw double-digit growth in May 2021, keeping in sight the low base effect due to the nationwide lockdown in the previous year.

Considering the pre-pandemic levels of May 2019, the current index is still at a lower level.
The unemployment rate eased to 9.2 percent in June 2021, after witnessing a spike of 11.9 percent in May 2021 due to the second wave.

The unemployment rate in urban areas remains higher (10.0 percent) than the 8.7 percent in rural areas due to local lockdowns and the prevalence of coronavirus cases during the second wave.

The gradual lifting of restrictions, vaccination and declining cases are pushing the workforce back into work, leading to a reduction in the unemployment rate.
